> Erwin Bergdoll, millionaire Phila-delphia brewer and auto race fan, has entered two cars of his own design in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, swelling the total list of entries for that event to nineteen. Bergoll ex-pects to drive one of the cars him-self, with his brother Grover at the wheel of the other. A third Bergoll entry, which was scheduled, did not

No matter how perfect a carbure-tor may be, if a long, exposed intake manifold is employed between the car-buretor and the intake valves a cermaterialize.

Bergdoll, though an amateur, is one of the track drivers of the racing manifold is employed between the carburetor and the intake valves a certain amount of gasoline will reach the cylinders in the form of tiny globules instead of in a gaseous state. The importance of the location of the intake manifold is being indicated more clearly as the quantity of the gasoline drops. In the first place it requires heat to convert the liquid gasoline into vapor the same as heat reduced him to second place. Brother gasoline into vapor the same as heat reduced him to second place. Brother is required to convert water into Grover is less well known, but under the experienced tutelage of Erwin is The modern carburetor is fitted expected to develop rapidly.

An experienced business man knows that he cannot get something for nothing. He is shrewd enough to know that he cannot get something for nothing where the other party has just the one chance to make or lose money. If the man he is dealing with cannot make money, there is no object in his dealing at all. Yet many owners of automobiles try to persuade themselves that they are not losers when they allow an automobile dealer to put an inflated value upon their cars in a trade.

Completely satisfactory means of dealing with the problem is as yet available.

But the motoring public is inclined to put great trust in time, as there is to be noted a tendency among many manufacturers to abandon the excessive brilliancy which they thought cure itself. However, it may be pointed out here that the functions of a headlight are two-fold—(1) to enable the driver to see the course of the double the driver to see the course of the course of other vehicles upon it. Of these, the second is probably the more important, and the possibility of re-
